Madame Ratazzi

Is one of the most notorious women in Italy. She is the granddaughter of Lucien Bonaparte, the eldest brother of Napoleon I, who married for his second wife a certain Alexandrine de Bleschamps. By her he had six children; the eldest was Letitia, who married in 1821 a Mr. Thomas Wyse, English Minister to Greece and Turkey. Madame Wyse led a very disreputable life. One of her children is this Madame Marie Ratazzi. She is own cousin to Cardinal Bonaparte in this way. Her grandfather, Prince Lucien, had one son by his first mar-riage, who married Zenaide, the daughter of Joseph Bonaparte, and thus formed what is called in the Almanac de Gotha the "elder branch of the Bonaparte family." The Cardinal is the eldest child of that marriage, the chief of the "Branche Ainee," and also cousin to Madame Ratazzi.

She has been very handsome, is still good-looking, though growing too stout; but she has the fine high Bonaparte cut in her face; she is clever, also, in a certain way; she has always belonged to the demi-monde. She mar-A few years ago she married Ratazzi, after having Victor Emanuel. Her marriage with Ratazzi has given her a certain position. As her husat court on state occasious, and could call the King "Cousin." Then, although the Emperor Louis Napoleon would not allow either her or her mother to come within several hundred miles of Paris, he counted them among the princesses of the Imperial family. But when ever she exercised the social privileges her birth and marriage with Ratazzi gave her, les grandes dames de par le monde made her feel her real position in a way which belongs only to women

She, as the heroine, claims to have been on the eve of marriage with the King, and deserted him for his Minister. In that novel she also pays off her social score against the great ladies of Turin and Florence. She has always held a salon, and since her marriage this salon has been crowded with men of letters and politicians. First class men, we all know go where first-class women would not condescend to go. She is said to be an extremely vain woman, and her writings-for she has always from youth been a scribbler of verses and feuilletons-are the drollest compositions imaginable. Once in a while she writes rousing puffs of herself and has them published anonymously. A very curious collection of these came out in Florence a year ago. Lately she has published a volume of verses. "Cora Patrie; ecnos Italiennes," is the title.—Rome Cor. Phila. Bul etin.

atrocity of the murder they had perpetrated. that the young man who prayed so touchingly on the morning of his execution, murdered the aged woman who had been to him more than a mother, and then sat down, a few hours later, and, with almost unparalleled coolness, prepared the following obituary of his victim:

On the 2d instant, Mrs. Lampley, the beloved wife of John Lampley, suddenly departed to a better world above, where all pain and suffering in the whole story of this great crime, as to take it out of the category of ordinary murders. Yet these men; these murderers of a hospitable and guildess woman-unpitying and remorseless as they showed themselves to have beenhave more shocked sincerely Christian people by their ostentatious professions of teligion, and by the liberal way in which they declared their love for and showered their forgiveness on everybody, than by the atrocity of the crime for which they suffered. The spectacle of their execution with the incidents attending it, and the confidence expressed by private, and the interviews with the ministers comes let it be swiftly and terribly carried out.

The convicted owe the law their lives. They do not owe the public prayers and speeches, and a programme a star actor might almost envy.' Nothing could more forcibly be said, or more timely. There is something radically wrong in our treatment of great criminals, and the somer we deal with them as they deserve; seclude them, after conviction and sentence, from the public gaze, and execute them privately, in the presence only of the proper authorities, the better it will be for us, and the fewer crimes we shall have.

PEARL HOMINY, GRITS AND SAMP, AND PEARL FLOUR AND MEAL

The offal from these various articles combined makes a very valuable article of food for horses and cows, to which the attention of those interested is invited.

We claim superiority for the Hominy made upon our Patent Mills for the following reasons: First. It is made from dry corn without having to go through the soaking process necessary in the old way of making hominy, for the purpose of removing the husks, which causes it to begin to spoil from the moment it is thus made. Whereas our process puts it in a drier condition than corn ever is naturally. Secondly. The same bunk of our Hominy will produce fifty per cent more of the cooked article produce hity per cent more of the cooked article than by the wet process, as ours swells while cooking, while the other swells while soaking, before being cooked.

Thirdly. It takes half the time to cook.

Fourthly. It can be shipped with safety from spoiling to any climate, making a cheap substitute for rice and beans. ute for rice and beans. The above also applies to our Pearl Corn Grits. The best proof of the superiority of Hominy and Grits made upon our Patent Mills is that they have been adopted by the Army and Navy of the United States, and approved by all who have used them
